

Dear Funder,

For the past 40 years, The Ciesla Foundation has produced documentaries about under known Jewish heroes. The Ciesla Foundation now seeks funds for a new documentary short, titled Pissed Off. This film will explore the underpublicized struggles faced by female lawmakers in Congress who advocated for equal access to restroom facilities in their place of work, the United States Capitol.

The Ciesla Foundation now seeks funds for a new documentary short, titled Pissed Off, again directed by Aviva Kempner. Marian Sears Hunter, who edited Ciesla's previous films on Hank Greenberg and Julius Rosenwald, which addressed the issues of anti-Semitism and racism, will edit this new documentary short about legislative sexism. Alison J. Richards, who was the associate producer on the Rosenwald DVD and the film about spy Moe Berg, and Connie Coopersmith, a political communications expert and television producer, will be the associate producers.

The Ciesla Foundation is a 501c (3) organization. With initial donations of $10,000 we are now officially raising the $290,000 needed to make Pissed Off. All donors will be listed on our website and contributors of $10,000 or more will also have the donor's name listed in the film credits. With your tax-deductible contribution to The Ciesla Foundation, we can preserve the legacy of the female legislators who challenged how Congress, from its conception, was designed to exclude women, both in participation and plumbing.

This year is a perfect time for this historical documentary on potty parity to be made: 2020 is the 100th anniversary of American women achieving the right to vote. Stories of Me Too sexual harassment and Time's Up campaigns of employment and income equality continue to appear in the news.

Please help The Ciesla Foundation tell the story of how female legislators fought to install a simple restroom near their workplace.

Sincerely,

Aviva Kempner
